

Consider the Cloud: An Examination

Consider the Cloud: An Examination

Whether you know it or not, the world is increasingly heading into the cloud. If your business isn't utilizing at least some variation of the cloud, you could be missing out on some major benefits.

Why Won't This Open?

A lot of small businesses—and we're not saying this is you—but a lot of small businesses have a tendency to accumulate hardware and software piecemeal, a kind of techno-Frankenstein crafted for utility. While understandable, at a certain point, the creation you thought you loved reveals itself as a lumbering monster of inefficiency.

With new cloud-based software systems like Office 365, you can now standardize your office's productivity tools in ways thought impossible just a few years ago. In fact, Office 365 is the most-used collaborative software in the market.

Sharing and collaborating on documents is now so streamlined that you never have to worry about formatting and open errors from documents passed around your office space.

When and Where To Work

Think of this:

It's not just you who wants to work poolside. Productivity is consistently shown to increase as your work environment becomes more mobile.

As a productivity tool, continuity in the cloud means 24/7 availability. Whether you're on your laptop at Starbucks, on your phone before takeoff, or at your desk, cloud continuity gives you the access you need, when you need it.

When all employees have the same tools and available access, your team's capabilities for collaboration greatly expand.

91%

of companies are planning mobile work strategies.

— insight.com

Essential Backend Stuff

With any element of your business, you want to know that there is security and reliability behind the work. Cloud backups offer you the security of off-site storage. This means in a localized emergency, say a flood or fire, your data is on lockdown at a separate but secured location.

We love Office 365 because of its capabilities to handle the productivity needs of any organization, whatever the size.

The AnchorSix Way

We consider ourselves experts in finding productivity essentials for SMBs. We start by discovering your best practices, nailing down the standard operating procedures that make the most sense for your company. Then, we put the accessibility and security of your business in the cloud.

Productivity isn't only in the cloud, but it starts there.
Call us today to learn more.

43 North 470 West
American Fork, Utah 84003
801.225.3800

www.anchorsix.com